Tax Methods Hit Before Industrial Congress

BUSINESS SEEN AS WITHERING THROUGH LAND

Enterprise System Unable To Assert Vigor, Says Harley L. Lutz

RESTRAINTS CRITICISED

Progression Of Federal Levies Cited As Threat To Private Property

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — A rap at the federal government's method of taxation was taken today by Harley L. Lutz, professor of public finance at Princeton university, in an address before the War Congress of American Industry.

Professor Lutz charged that "the enemies of the enterprise system have been able to establish by political methods a series of restraints which amount to strangleholds upon business which effectively prevent the enterprise from re-asserting its traditional vigor."

He told the assembled industrialists that tax progression was "the most potent of all weapons for the destruction of private property and private initiative, and for the introduction of the socialist state."

Recovery Hindered
"It is clear that there can be no vigorous recovery of the enterprise system in the post-war period without a remarkable relaxation of the progressive taxes," he said. "But it is equally clear that the enemies of a free society are fully aware of the advantage they now hold, with these taxes, and that they will resort to every kind of trick, stratagem and artifice to prevent such relaxation."

Professor Lutz declared that under the present methods of war financing — "methods which are largely the result of a stupid and short-sighted treasury opposition to the kinds of taxation which should be used" — there was "every prospect" of a public debt so large as to result eventually "in some form of repudiation."

THREE TO ONE U. S. AIR SCORE AGAINST AXIS

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIR-DROME IN TUNISIA, Dec. 4 — Axis fighters, confronted by the cream of United States and British empire pilots, today are losing three times more planes than the allies.

The American and British air-men go into the air many times in a single day in the practically continuous round of aerial duels.

In the intense air activity axis planes constantly harass the allied positions, hammering communications lines by day and pounding forward landing fields by night.

Hot Licks Put In by U. S. Bugler

"Blues In The Night" Played In Dismal Liberia Ends Black Troop Blues

U. S. ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN LIBERIA, (Delayed) — When medals are passed out for contributions to army morale, Private Eddie Morse should be a cinch for one of the awards in the opinion of many men and officers with the American task force in Liberia.

Morse, 25-year-old Negro bugler from Pittsburgh, put in his "licks" for morale in the first night ashore, and the men of his company will testify that they not only were substantial "licks," but very, very timely ones as well.

As a matter of fact, they were golden notes on a trumpet which Morse had brought along from the United States in addition to his bugle—and unaccompanied trumpet solos probably will never sound sweeter to Eddie's listeners until Gabriel blows his horn.

It was a dismal night, that first one in Liberia. The officers and men first ashore had worked all day erecting tents in a driving, tropical rainstorm. Now there was nothing to do. Card games were out because the only light in camp was a lantern in headquarters tent. Reading by flashlight might have been possible—if any literature had been available.

Realizing that malaria-bearing mosquitoes abounded in jungle areas adjacent to the camp, Lieut. William D. Beach of Butler, Pa., company commander, ordered his men to their beds immediately after supper.

So the soldiers donned damp pajamas, crawled into damp cots and adjusted damp mosquito nets, thinking dark thoughts about the (Continued on Page Three)

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Republicans are meeting Monday in St. Louis, with one eye on Willie and one eye on '44, to name a national chairman.

We better get '42 and '43 over before we start planning for '44.

Who is chairman of the Republican National Committee won't influence the Nips at Guadalcanal or the Nazis in Tunisia in the months to come.

It won't make any difference to them whether he's an isolationist, a globalite, a vegetarian or an acrobat.

But it will make a lot of difference to us whether he's a Republican or a faded Democrat.

This is a two-party country and if the Republicans will just pick as chairman, a Republican who believes in the two-party system of checks and balances they will have done their job.

The Democrats have a strong leader. The country can't lose if the Republicans pick a strong leader for now—not for '44.

SIGHT OF SON ENDS MOURNING FOR GOB'S DAD

HILLSBORO, Dec. 4 — Harry Woods, grief-stricken when he heard a news broadcast yesterday, was happy beyond words today.

His radio brought him news that five army transports had been sunk in the battle for North Africa. The crew of one of them, the Joseph Hewes, included his son, Hugh.

Nazis Thought These Proved Victory Over Reds

The Germans printed the photos above in a propaganda magazine to show their forces winning a great "victory" at Stalingrad, but more than that, the photos show the fortitude and courage of the Russian people and soldiers. The Nazis said the top photo shows Stalingrad after attacks by Stuka dive bombers and that the Russian civilians, lower photo, had their homes smashed by German bombs and shells. Well, Stalingrad has held out against the worst the Nazis could hurl against it and now it appears the siege may be broken.

County Figure May Be Below Any In Last Seven Or Eight Months

Pickaway county draft office hinted Friday that Selective Service officials of the state intend to take far fewer men from the county in its January contingent than in any month in the last seven or eight.

An advance notice received Friday by the board calls for considerably fewer than 100 men, the number requested being about half of the number demanded in quotas of several months preceding November. November's quota for the county was a few more than 100 men, about 80 being accepted for service.

The board is assigning a group of its 13 and 19 year old registrants for medical examination each day, this class being prepared to fill the January call. Youths (Continued on Page Three)

100,000 BRITISH CHILDREN GET GIFTS FROM U. S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — There will be a Merry Christmas over the white cliffs of Dover this year when 100,000 English children open as many Christmas packages sent them by Bundles for Britain.

And the best thing about it, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, president of the relief organization disclosed, is that the shipment of the packages did not take up any valuable cargo space.

Returning from a visit to London where she arranged for distribution of the packages among the under-privileged children of England, Mrs. Bingham said that the packages, containing chiefly rag dolls and animals, were wrapped in small bundles that were easily wedged in between the bulky cargoes of war supplies.

Mrs. Bingham, widow of the former American ambassador to Great Britain, also revealed that 171 cases of reconditioned surgical instruments were being sent to England and Libya by Bundles for Britain. The instruments were donated by doctors throughout this country.

OHIOAN DARES DEATH TO SAVE DOWNED FLYER

GUADALCANAL, Nov. 15 — (Delayed) — Second Lieut. W. E. Houf of Athens, Ohio, dared gun fire from Jap shore patrols and strafing from zeros today to save the life of a downed navy fighter pilot, Lieut. A. D. Pollack.

The doughty Marine, who was watching from the shore, saw Pollack's plane waver, then glide down to the sea in a crash landing. Almost immediately, Houf said, Pollack's plane tipped over and sank.

Jumping into a rubber boat, the type pilots use, Houf started rowing to the rescue of the fallen pilot, a distance of about 8,000 yards.

Pollack fell near Cape Esperance, almost opposite Kokumbona, a Jap stronghold, and within easy shooting distance of both pilot and rescuer.

When Houf arrived at the site of the crash-out, Pollack was drifting in his lifebelt. His feet were propped up on his parachute apparatus and his head almost under water.

Houf said Pollack seemed stunned and almost unconscious. Pulling Pollack into the two-man rubber boat, Houf started the long row back to shore. The tide was against him and it took almost three hours.

Asked why he had a rubber boat on beach patrol, Houf, a clean-cut 24-year-old youngster with a brilliant smile, said he merely was being prepared.

"I heard those fellows out in the drink crying out for help all last night. It was tough being unable to do a thing. So I got the boat."

"But don't ask me where," he added with a boyish grin.

BLOC READY FOR AG PRICE DRIVE

Senate Approval Sought For Surprise Bill From Lower House

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — Senate farm bloc leaders today prepared to drive for passage of a resolution designed to boost ceiling price of agriculture products after the house caught the administration by complete surprise and rushed through the presidentially-opposed measure.

In an unexpected move, the house by unanimous consent passed the proposal, introduced by Rep. Pace (D) Ga., which requires the inclusion of farm wages in computing parity prices. A similar proposal met defeat during the bitter fight over the anti-inflation bill in September, after President Roosevelt declared that he was "unalterably" opposed to such a step.

Despite the conviction that President Roosevelt would veto the bill, Sen. Elmer Thomas (D) Okla., co-sponsor of the drive to include labor in parity determination in the September battle, announced that a meeting of the senate (Continued on Page Three)

EARLY RETURN TO WAR DESIRE OF MacNIDER

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA, Dec. 4 — Impatiently awaiting the earliest opportunity to return to the battlefield, Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider, former U. S. assistant secretary of war, today is recovering in a military hospital from injuries suffered when he was hit by a hand grenade on the Buna front in New Guinea November 24.

The tough, lean 53-year old veteran from Mason City, Ia., was with a United States task force ground unit engaged in bitter fighting around Buna when he was ambushed by Jap soldiers.

Gen. MacNider suffered eye and face injuries and body lacerations, but none of the wounds is serious.

Polish Army Commander Sees Hitler In Position Of Allies In 1939

HARD ROAD TO VICTORY

Millions In Occupied Areas Believed Ready To Rise Against Huns

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — Belief that Adolf Hitler's "blitzkrieg" methods have ceased to be effective and that Germany is now in the same position in which the democracies found themselves in 1939, was expressed today by General Wladyslaw Sikorski, Polish prime minister and commander-in-chief of the Polish armed forces.

In an exclusive statement, Gen. Sikorski, who is visiting Washington at the invitation of President Roosevelt, said that while the "road to victory is still hard and difficult," Hitler is now definitely on the defensive.

Gen. Sikorski also expressed the confident belief that hundreds of millions of people living within axis-controlled Europe are eagerly awaiting the opportunity to help the allies achieve victory.

Positions Reversed

"Hitler today is in the position in which the democracies found themselves in 1939," the Polish leader said. "He is moving in the same spiral of strategic ideas as they did at that time."

"Thus the new conception of a Maginot line in the form of an eastwall and a westwall, the thesis that time is on Germany's side, the slogan of a long war, and last but not least, Churchill's slogan of 'blood and sweat' are arguments which Hitler, Goebbels, Goering and Himmler are using today for the consumption of their own people."

"Those who are optimists in times of success and pessimists in bad times render the worst possible service to the cause. Therefore, I should not like to kindle too high hopes at the present time."

WPA No Longer Needed; Immediate Liquidation Ordered by President

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — President Roosevelt today ordered prompt liquidation of the Works Projects Administration declaring "a national work relief program is no longer necessary."

In a letter to Federal Works Administrator Phillip Fleming, the President declared closing of WPA operations would conserve a large amount of funds appropriated for the organization and "there will be no need to provide projects funds" for the next fiscal year.

The President said it will be necessary to close out all projects in many states by February 1, 1943, and in all other states as soon as feasible.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 4 — The liquidation of WPA in Ohio has been going on since July 1, the beginning of the present fiscal year, and now there are only about 13,000 on the WPA rolls in the state, Dr. Carl Watson, state administrator, declared today.

Six months ago, Dr. Watson said, there were about 45,000 on the WPA rolls. An all-time high was in October, 1938, when 287,000 persons were employed.

Dr. Watson said it would be impossible to close all projects by February 1, but that WPA would cease to function as soon as possible. There are about 200 projects in operation in the state now.

Delos H. Marcy, relief administrator for Pickaway county, said Friday that the WPA liquidation

WLB ASSURES VISIT BY SANTA

Fear Of High War Plant Wage Lure Erased By Federal Edict

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 — America's children today received a solemn assurance from their government that Santa Claus will be around at Christmas time.

Neither total war nor the threat of inflation will stop Santa from visiting every child, no matter what his age, the government promised.

What's it all about? Here's the answer: Apparently fearing that even Santa would desert his charges for the crass consideration of a steady war plant job, the War Labor Board, "in formal convocation assembled," has decided that the roly-poly gent in the red suit can receive a larger wage this year than he did a year ago.

Thus, the War Labor Board, delegated by the President to control the compensations of all wage earners, sought to insure the presence of St. Nicholas at his accustomed (Continued on Page Three)

HARD FIGHT IN TUNISIA

Tank Battles Result In Standoff—Germans Fail To Halt Russians

By International News Service
Allied forces in the Pacific were tensely alert for some sudden, dramatic stroke by Japan to gain a face-saving victory as the first anniversary of the sneak-attack on Pearl Harbor drew near.

Despite two recent smashing victories, which cut heavily into the enemy's dwindling seapower and airpower allied military and naval leaders were on guard throughout the Pacific — from Alaska to Australia.

A daring surprise raid on the Japanese-held airdrome at Kupang destroyed 21 enemy planes, a communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today on the heels of another American naval victory in the Solomons.

Jap Ships Sunk

A navy communique announced the sinking of six enemy warships, two transports and one cargo ship in a Guadalcanal-bound convoy the night of November 30, at the cost of one allied cruiser sunk. Two of the enemy warships were either larger destroyers or cruisers and four were destroyers.

The flotilla was turned back without achieving its goal. No enemy landings have been made on the island since mid-November.

Australian-made Beaufighters swept over the Japanese airdrome at Kupang, Timor, in a surprise raid that caught the enemy flat-footed. Bombs were dropped among grounded planes, smashing 18 heavy bombers and three fighters.

Nips Pushed Back

Enemy ground forces on New Guinea were pressed back almost to the very beaches of the Gona-Buna strip which they still clung to tenaciously. Fighting was described (Continued on Page Three)

McNUTT'S TALK SCATTERED ALL OVER BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 — War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt didn't talk over the radio last night—and for a very good reason. His speech was spread all over Broadway!

McNutt spoke earlier at the American Society of Engineers meeting and his remarks were engraved on the master record for electrical transcription via the radio. But kismet and alcohol interfered.

Just as the messenger boy whistled his way down Broadway with the master record under his arm, two men who probably knew what they were celebrating, stumbled from a tavern, bumped into the boy and McNutt's words were "gone with the wind."

Frantic efforts of studio executives attempting to arrange a re-recording failed completely and the broadcast was cancelled.

POLL PARROT AND HUSBAND SHARE ESTATE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 3 — A poll parrot and a husband were named heirs in a Westerville woman's will filed today in Franklin county probate court. Each was bequeathed an equal sum of $500.

The woman was the late Mrs. Kathryn M. Sherry, who died November 23. In making her bequest to the parrot, Mrs. Sherry wrote: "I want $500 set aside for the care of 'Polly,' for a new and larger cage and the best food. Some of my best friends would care for him as I do."

To my husband, the will continued, "from whom I am separated, I leave $500."

Tank Battles Result In Standoff—Germans Fail To Halt Russians

By International News Service Allied forces in the Pacific were tensely alert for some sudden, dramatic stroke by Japan to gain a face-saving victory as the first anniversary of the sneak-attack on Pearl Harbor drew near.

Despite two recent smashing victories, which cut heavily into the enemy's dwindling seapower and airpower allied military and naval leaders were on guard throughout the Pacific—from Alaska to Australia.

A daring surprise raid on the Japanese-held airbase at Kupang destroyed 21 enemy planes, a communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today on the heels of another American naval victory in the Solomons.

Jap Ships Sunk

A navy communique announced the sinking of six enemy warships, two transports and one cargo ship in a Guadalcanal-bound convoy the night of November 30, at the cost of one allied cruiser sunk. Two of the enemy warships were either larger destroyers or cruisers and four were destroyers.

The flotilla was turned back without achieving its goal. No enemy landings have been made on the island since mid-November.

Australian-made Beaufighters swept over the Japanese airfield at Kupang, Timor, in a surprise raid that caught the enemy flat-footed. Bombs were dropped among grounded planes, smashing 18 heavy bombers and three fighters.

Nips Pushed Back

Enemy ground forces on New Guinea were pressed back almost to the very beaches of the Gona-Buna strip which they still clung to tenaciously. Fighting was de-

McNUTT'S TALK SCATTERED ALL OVER BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt didn't talk over the radio last night—and for a very good reason. His speech was spread all over Broadway!

McNutt spoke earlier at the American Society of Engineers meeting and his remarks were engraved on the master record for electrical transcription via the radio. But kismet and alcohol interfered.

Just as the messenger boy whistled his way down Broadway with the master record under his arm, two men who probably knew what they were celebrating, stumbled from a tavern, bumped into the boy and McNutt's words were "gone with the wind."

Frantic efforts of studio executives attempting to arrange a re-recording failed completely and the broadcast was cancelled.

POLL PARROT AND HUSBAND SHARE ESTATE

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 3.—A poll parrot and a husband were named heirs in a Westerville woman's will filed today in Franklin county probate court. Each was bequeathed an equal sum of $500.

The woman was the late Mrs. Kathryn M. Sherry, who died November 23. In making her bequest to the parrot, Mrs. Sherry wrote: "I want $500 set aside for the care of 'Polly', for a new and larger cage and the best foods. Some of my best friends would care for him as I do."

To my husband, the will continued, "from whom I am separated, I leave $500."

VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGN GETS FLYING START

Bond Purchases Of First Four Days Reach Total Of $340,000

GOAL SET AT $1,009,800

Clark Will Leads Committee In Drive Scheduled For Full Month

Pickaway county Victory Loan campaign, promoted by the government in an effort to raise many millions of dollars during December and conducted by bankers of the nation, has made a splendid start.

Clark Will, president of the Third National bank and chairman of the Victory Loan campaign, said Friday that the first four days of the campaign have brought a total of $340,000 in bond purchases.

Mr. Will announced the total after checking with all banks of the county including all four in Circleville, and institutions in Williamsport, New Holland, Ashville and Commercial Point. Every bank in the nation is playing an important role in the effort to raise the government's quota.

Pickaway county's goal for the month is $1,009,800.

Bankers have been delegated the task of disposing of the various government issues, and all have started their assignments with a zest that indicates success.

The Victory Loan campaign does not replace the War Bond and Stamp sale, this campaign being continued at a high rate of speed. Earl A. Smith, chairman of the War Bond committee in the county, is awaiting figures from the Federal Reserve bank in Cleveland concerning the county's total in all classifications during November. Reports received earlier in the month indicated that the county may go over the top for the third consecutive month.

BARTHOLOMEW DEFENDANT IN ALIMONY SUIT

Don C. Bartholomew of Columbus, former resident of New Holland and widely known in Pickaway county, was named defendant Thursday in Franklin county court of domestic relations when his wife, Clair B. Bartholomew, brought action for alimony and support money for their three children. At the same time she filed a second suit for $25,000 damages against a Columbus woman whom she charges with alienating the affections of her husband.

Mrs. Bartholomew accuses Mary Roshak, whose address is given as the Seneca hotel, of taking her husband from her during two and one-half years of association.

Mrs. Bartholomew also asked the court to order her husband to give an accounting of the proceeds from three farms in Pickaway and Logan counties which she says were deeded to her husband by his parents to hold in trust for the three children.

At Revival

THE Rev. W. L. Seith, shown above, is conducting the annual revival at the St. Paul Evangelical church four miles east of Circleville. The services continue each night at 8 o'clock except Saturday. The evangelist is a resident of Cleveland and he has been active many years in Ohio religious circles. The Rev. Harold Dutt is the host pastor.

WITH LOCAL BOYS UNDER THE FLAG

Aviation Cadet Donald W. Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wray Henry, North Court street, is assigned to Squadron 14, Flight A, AAFPS—(B-N), Ellington field, Texas. Young Henry is training for bombardier duty.

Corporal Carl Palm, 33rd Det. A. D. G. Hq. and Hq. Sec. Patterson field, Fairfield, O., is home on furlough. He will have a birthday on Christmas day.

Robert D. Fickardt, formerly of Circleville, reported Thursday at Miami university, Oxford, for two months training before leaving for the University of Iowa where he will receive his pre-flight training in the Naval Air Corps.

A navy public relations procurement official from the Detroit recruiting office will be in Lancaster recruiting station Monday from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. to interview men who believe they may have

CITY FATHERS DISCUSS RATES WITH WATER CO.

Circleville council as a committee met Thursday evening with Ohio Water Service company officials to discuss a new rate schedule for consumers and for fire hydrant rental. The session was conducted in city hall.

G. Taylor Evans of Struthers, vice-president and general manager of the utility, and Harry B. Denman, Circleville manager, represented the company.

John C. Goeller, council president, said the meeting was merely for discussion and that a schedule of rates will probably be offered at a later session. The proposal will not be ready for council's regular meeting, December 16, however, he said.

No mention was made at the conference concerning purchase of the plant by the city. Council is considering such action, with several bonding companies offering to finance the purchase.

FIRST RATION BOOK DEADLINE SET FOR DEC. 15

Persons who do not have War Ration Book No. 1, needed to buy coffee under rationing, must file applications for the book at the Pickaway county rationing office in city hall not later than December 15, or go without War Ration Book No. 2. The second ration book will be issued shortly after the first of the new year, and no person who does not have book No. 1 will be issued the second all-purpose book.

Book 1 has been used for sugar rationing since May 5, and recently was validated also for coffee rationing. Stamps 20 through 28 are known as the coffee stamps when contained in books showing the holder to be 15 years of age or older. The first stamp to be surrendered is No. 27, which entitles an eligible buyer to one pound at any time during the five-week period ending January 3.

Book No. 1 must be presented to local boards before No. 2 can be issued. Registration for Book No. 2 is expected to be conducted at various schools of the county in the same manner in which the first ration book was dispensed.

Private Mail Between U. S. Areas is Censored

BY DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Members of the senate judiciary committee heard a first-hand chapter on gestic methods which they never dreamed existed inside the United States when they listened to the testimony of Governor Ernest Gruening of Alaska the other day.

Governor Gruening told how 400 censorship employees operate in Seattle, reading all mail between Alaska and the United States, and how many of these letters, called "intercepts," are mimeographed and circulated to 31 U. S. government offices, and four British agencies.

The same censorship applies to Puerto Rico and other territories of the United States, though they are supposed to enjoy the rights and advantages of being under the U. S. Government. Despite the manpower shortage, a total of 11,000 persons are reported to be engaged in opening and reading mail and circulating it around Government bureaus.

Most letters are strictly private and between army officers and their wives, discussing plans for visiting each other. Some letters complain about the price of food, others about living conditions.

One letter from a professor in Puerto Rico told how a Puerto Rican politician had sent his wife to the United States and had taken a colored mistress by whom he had three black children, because he believed it politically wise to play in with the colored race. The letter stated that Governor Tugwell didn't seem much concerned about the morals of the politician.

This letter was circulated to various Government agencies and the British.

WISE GENERAL BUCKNER

Another letter from Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, U. S. commander in Alaska, was addressed to Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. Buckner wisely stated that he didn't trust letters, so wanted to come to Washington and tell Bridges some things.

Various letters written by minor government officials were critical of their chiefs. Many letters were highly amusing, but gave absolutely no military information.

In fact the only letters the Senators examined which might have contained military information, told of a snowstorm in Alaska, and an ice avalanche.

Before Governor Gruening testified before the senate judiciary committee he got the approval of his chief, Secretary Ickes, to call on Byron Price, efficient chief of Censorship. Accompanying him were Jack Diamond, Congressional Delegate from Alaska and Ben Thoron, chief of the Bureau of Territories.

Gruening argued that the practice of censoring mail between different divisions of the United States should stop.

"It's un-American," he argued. "It's very useful information," countered Price.

"Yes, and it also might be useful information if we censored every letter mailed by 130,000,000 people," replied Governor Gruening. "Besides," he added, "it's unlawful."

Price admitted that there was no law to back him up, but did not mention that a law was pending in Congress, in fact had already passed the House.

CENSOR BILL STOPPED

Finally he agreed to two of Gruening's contentions: (1) that copies of American newspapers and magazines need not be clipped before being sent to Alaska and the territories; (2) that colored films need not be censored when shipped to Rochester, N. Y., to be developed. Gruening had argued that if spies were going to take pictures of Alaska they would not ship their films to Rochester, as is necessary for the development of colored films. However, the Office of Censorship had been censoring these films anyway.

Price did not agree, however, to stop reading personal mail between the mainland and American territories.

Shortly thereafter, the new censorship bill came before the Senate. Having passed the House, it gave legal sanction to what the Censorship Office already was doing without legal sanction.

As the bill was about to come up for a vote, Senator George Norris of Nebraska, who had learned what the bill was all about, gave notice that he would launch a long attack, unless it was sent back to the judiciary committee for further consideration. Other Senators also got rebellious.

So the bill was stalled, the Committee called Governor Gruening for a hearing, and the fate of the censorship between the U. S. and its territories is now in the hands of the judiciary committee.

HAROLD ICKES' ENEMIES

President Roosevelt gave his own very frank opinion of the nation's attitude toward labor when CIO's Phil Murray and AFL's Bill Green called to ask that a labor leader be made Manpower chief.

They proposed the name of Dan Tobin, AFL Teamsters' boss, as Secretary of Labor and head of Manpower. The President, however, countered with the name of Secretary Ickes.

"This is a job for someone who isn't afraid of making enemies," said the President with a grin. "Harold Ickes should fill the bill perfectly. He has more enemies than anyone in the cabinet."

Green and Murray chuckled at the quip. Then they froze when the President went on to say that public sentiment at the moment would be antagonistic to the appointment of a labor leader as chief of Manpower.

The President hastened to say that he had the highest esteem for Dan Tobin (who was once a member of the White House secretariat), but he stood his ground against appointment of a labor leader to head Manpower. Since then, Murray and Tobin have been voicing disapproval to friends.

SOLDIERS-TO-BE NOW MUST CARRY LISTING CARD

Selective Service headquarters issued an order Friday to all registrants to make room in their billfolds for another necessary card. From now on all Pickaway countians of military age who registered for service and are not yet in the armed forces must carry their classification card as well as the registration card.

The new order, issued by the state office, requires that the classification card be carried at all times and that the registrant display it to any policeman or government official who asks to see it.

Selective Service officials said registrants who have not yet received a classification card will be mailed a new type postal card which has a perforated section which can be torn off and carried. Registrants who have been classified also will receive the perforated postal card.

age, consecutive action in putting them through, and above all it demands daring conceptions, wrestling the initiative from the enemy and resorting to determined action, the beginning of which we may observe today in Africa.

"To exaggerate the arguments that the Germans themselves have proved that the maginot line is a false myth would be a mistake. It would be equally erroneous to state that German defense has not stood the test and that the fortress in which the Germans have transformed the European continent will fall easily.

Progress In War
"The technique of warfare has made great progress in recent times which has restored the lost value of defense. Thus new ideas and inventions as well as courageous planning are needed in order to restore the recent importance to attack. This is urgently necessary for us now.

"The German European fortress can be attacked not only from the Atlantic, from the Mediterranean and Black seas, from the Volga, the Don and Lake Ilmen, and from the Baltic and Arctic seas, but also, which is equally important, and perhaps even more important, from within.

"There within that fortress live hundreds of millions of people ardently desiring freedom and planning their future fight for independence. They are eagerly awaiting the moment when they will receive arms to turn them against their torturers and oppressors and become an immeasurably important factor for victory."

RATIONING CUTS WORK DAY FOR GAS STATIONS

Gasoline rationing, effective this week, has resulted in many Circleville filling stations closing their doors and turning out their lights much earlier than usual in the evening. Many stations which have remained open until 10 and 11 o'clock each evening are now closing at 9 and 9:30.

They save much overhead expense, including money paid in light bills and to help, during a period when gasoline sales are lower than usual.

However, some gasoline distributors are expecting the sales trend to start going up after a week or 10 days. Sales have been off about 75 percent since the day rationing started, but distributors believe that most motorists had tanks of their cars filled prior to rationing, and that some had stored a quantity of gasoline in their garages and about their homes. When these reserve supplies are gone sales of gasoline will start to increase.

Circleville police department's traffic department declared Friday that it has noticed a great decrease in the number of automobiles on the streets, especially after night.

scribed as "tough, close and fierce" by an allied spokesman.

Artillery barrages and continuous aerial bombings are gradually reducing Japanese positions and allied forces moved steadily ahead in mopping up operations.

Fierce fighting continued in Tunisia following the series of tank battles which were generally agreed to be a stand-off. Heavy fighting raged today in the Terboura-Mateur-Djedida triangle which control the approaches to Tunis and Bizerte. American tanks were giving a good account of themselves.

Allied bombers smashed at axis airports from Tunisia to Crete, and torpedo planes sank at least two enemy merchant ships in a southbound convoy off eastern Tunisia.

Airborne German reinforcements, transported by shuttling transport planes, failed to stem the Russian advances before Moscow and Stalingrad. Soviet forces moved steadily ahead after repulsing numerous axis counterattacks. A communique reported destruction of 40 big three-motored Junker transports on Wednesday, making a three-day total of 90 troop carriers destroyed.

Italy still showed signs of cracking. The London Daily Express reported that an influential group of senators and military figures had called on King Victor Emmanuel to take Italy out of the war and wipe out the last vestiges of the Fascist regime.

The convention will come to a close with an annual dinner to-night, at which the speakers will be Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, and Henry J. Kaiser, the famous west coast shipbuilder.

Henderson Talks

Earlier, Price Administrator Leon Henderson told the convention that rationing of a number of items of clothing might be expected during the coming year, and with it, he warned will come further government regulation.

"There are going to be more czars, I am afraid," he said, "and I think there will be more red tape rather than less.

"There will be more decisions made about rent, ration and price affairs in the district offices 'outside of Washington.

"As for rationing, my anticipation is that we will be required to ration a number of the essential items of clothing and food in the cost of living index."

Walter D. Fuller, president of the Curtis Publishing company warned that the concentration of industry and manpower on war production might be expected to have post war repercussions.

"Scramble the economic eggs in any thorough-going concentration under government direction," he said, "and not even the government can unscramble them again. We shall have an end of voluntary enterprise — a totalitarian economy."

Then it was that Eddie Morse raised his horn to his lips and sounded a tentative note. It was a wailing, complaining "G" below middle "C," but it was glorious for all of that, and it sputtered into the opening strain of "Blues in the Night."

An enemy attack on the embryo camp could hardly have been more electrifying. Spontaneous cheers from every tent drowned out Morse temporarily, but they dropped off in a hurry. No one wanted to miss a note. Then, from a tent across the camp from Eddie's, a rich, complaining baritone voice picked up the tune:

"A woman's a two-faced—A worrisome thing who'll leave yuh to sing the blues in the night!"

Other voices of Negro fighting men joined in, branching off into the various harmony parts. Crowded into his mosquito-netted cot, an inspired Eddie Morse played the concert of his life. From "Blues in the Night"—an appropriate opener if ever there was one—he went into "Blue Because of You," then "You Can't Escape From Me."

Outside Eddie's tent, a hundred Liberian natives from nearby jungle villages gathered around silently and wondered. And in headquarters tent, Lieutenant Bill Beach smiled for the first time in many hours and relaxed on his cot.

The full membership of the board, appointed to deal with nation-shaking labor disputes, said "the role of Santa Claus in a war-torn world is unique."

It will be all right for Santa to receive a wage boost, "provided, that the term bona fide Santa Claus shall be construed to include only such persons as wear a red robe, white whiskers and other well-recognized accouterments befitting their station in life."

The August board also insisted that, in return for this exemption to the wage freeze, Santas must "have a kindly and jovial disposition and use their high office of juvenile trust to spread the Christmas spirit of goodwill among all men, women and children."

The board's order was full of legal phraseology and studded with terms like "whereas" and "provided that" and "provided further."

CAYCE SELECTS NEW KEROSENE AND OIL PANEL

Kerosene and fuel oil panel was set up Thursday evening by the Pickaway county rationing board in an effort to relieve the hard-pressed gasoline panel, headed by Eldred Cayce, which has been handling duties of both units.

George D. McDowell, rationing administrator, said the kerosene and fuel oil panel will consist of Clarence Helvering, W. E. Wallace and Frank Turner, this group to name its own chairman. The panel will handle all questions concerning kerosene and fuel oil which appear before the board in the future.

The rationing office, located in city hall, spread out Friday to include part of the council chamber. Fifteen high school pupils were loaned temporarily to the board by Circleville high school to help process kerosene coupons which residents of the county must have after December 10 if they wish to buy kerosene or fuel oil. The school youngsters were operating efficiently Friday and the board declared that quite a lift would be provided by the pupils.

The rationing board, which met Thursday evening with full membership present, said that only matters of routine business were handled at the session.

ate agriculture committee had been arranged for tomorrow to consider the Pace bill.

Thomas said that an effort will be made to place the measure on the senate calendar Monday and predicted that it would be passed unless there is a filibuster against it.

"If they do filibuster," he declared, "we'll be able to place definite responsibility.

"If we pass the bill and if, in view of the recent vote of the people, a veto is forthcoming, this administration is on its way out from top to bottom."

While Sen. Ellender (D) La., voiced doubt that any action will be taken before the present congress expires January 3, Sen. Russell (D) Ga., declared that there is a good chance that the senate will pass the bill before that time.

A fight over the measure was considered certain, although sponsors of the legislation indicated their belief that they would have sufficient votes to pass the bill even over a presidential veto.

In fighting the parity revision proposal several months ago, administration leaders said that it would increase the parity level to 112 percent instead of fixing it at the 100 percent level asked by the President and estimated that it would add close to $4,000,000,000 to the consumers cost of living.

Many of the 18-19 year olds are boys who are still in school in the city and county system. All are asking deferments until they are graduated in May and June or until the end of the school year if they are not seniors.

Men sent to fill December quotas will start moving to Columbus during the next 10 days, the first contingent already having received notices from the board to appear for the trip before the army medical team. The second group will go a week later. The December quota is somewhat more than 100 men, the draft office not being permitted to announce the definite number.

It would be equally erroneous to state that German defense has not stood the test and that the fortress in which the Germans have transformed the European continent will fall easily.

"The technique of warfare has made great progress in recent times which has restored the lost value of defense. Thus new ideas and inventions as well as courageous planning are needed in order to restore the recent importance to attack. This is urgently necessary for us now.

Enlistment of Samuel Curtis Caldwell of Mount Sterling Route 3 in the U. S. coast guard at Pittsburgh was announced Friday by the Pickaway county Selective Service board.

CAYCE SELECTS NEW KEROSENE AND OIL PANEL

Kerosene and fuel oil panel was set up Thursday evening by the Pickaway county rationing board in an effort to relieve the hard-pressed gasoline panel, headed by Eldred Cayce, which has been handling duties of both units.

George D. McDowell, rationing administrator, said the kerosene and fuel oil panel will consist of Clarence Helvering, W. E. Wallace and Frank Turner, this group to name its own chairman. The panel will handle all questions concerning kerosene and fuel oil which appear before the board in the future.

The rationing office, located in city hall, spread out Friday to include part of the council chamber. Fifteen high school pupils were loaned temporarily to the board by Circleville high school to help process kerosene coupons which residents of the county must have after December 10 if they wish to buy kerosene or fuel oil. The school youngsters were operating efficiently Friday and the board declared that quite a lift would be provided by the pupils.

The rationing board, which met Thursday evening with full membership present, said that only matters of routine business were handled at the session.

FEVER QUARANTINE

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, placed a scarlet fever quarantine Thursday at the residence of Mrs. Brooks Campbell, Duval, where Mrs. Campbell's daughter, Sue Nance, 12, is ill. The fever quarantine is the only one in the Harrison township district at the present time.

ate agriculture committee had been arranged for tomorrow to consider the Face bill.

Thomas said that an effort will be made to place the measure on the senate calendar Monday and predicted that it would be passed unless there is a filibuster against it.

"If they do filibuster," he declared, "we'll be able to place definite responsibility.

"If we pass the bill and if, in view of the recent vote of the people, a veto is forthcoming, this administration is on its way out from top to bottom."

While Sen. Ellender (D) La., voiced doubt that any action will be taken before the present congress expires January 3, Sen. Russell (D) Ga., declared that there is a good chance that the senate will pass the bill before that time.

A fight over the measure was considered certain, although sponsors of the legislation indicated their belief that they would have sufficient votes to pass the bill even over a presidential veto.

In fighting the parity revision proposal several months ago, administration leaders said that it would increase the parity level to 112 percent instead of fixing it at the 100 percent level asked by the President and estimated that it would add close to $4,000,000,000 to the consumers cost of living.

of this group will fill all other quotas until the group is exhausted. After that men married and having only wives as dependents will be called up for army training.

Many of the 18-19 year olds are boys who are still in school in the city and county system. All are asking deferments until they are graduated in May and June or until the end of the school year if they are not seniors.

Men sent to fill December quotas will start moving to Columbus during the next 10 days, the first contingent already having received notices from the board to appear for the trip before the army medical team. The second group will go a week later. The December quota is somewhat more than 100 men, the draft office not being permitted to announce the definite number.

OPEN LETTERS TO AMERICANS

ALL: Pearl Harbor Day was a day of infamy, it is true. But the infamy was not America's. In future times it may well become, in national memory, a day of liberation. Pearl Harbor set free the United States from old bonds of pacifistic thinking, from inhibitions of all sorts as regards the war for freedom which had already been going on in Europe for more than two years, in Asia for many more. Pearl Harbor set us free from depending on the outside world for our rubber and other necessities of modern life. By the time another Pearl Harbor Day rolls around, the new synthetic rubber industry, now in an infancy which requires coddling, will be well on the way to a useful youth. There will be other material gains in the setting free of minds from old ways of thinking and doing. But the really great gain is in the unity in purpose and direction which has come to this nation. Americans have learned all over again that freedom is worth fighting for, that slavery is worse than death, that his strength is as the strength of ten who has a righteous cause, and that nothing can stop the march of the human race toward liberty when free men unite in their determination to stay free.

CIRCUITEER.

TO VOLUNTEER CORPS

WORKERS: You men and women who gave many, many hours of your time to assist in gasoline rationing deserve thanks of rationing officials and from the public in general for the role you played. The job was a difficult one, and now that it is ended you should feel proud for the part you had in it. All of you are praised in a note submitted by Eldred Cayce, gasoline panel official. Some of its excerpts follow: "This has been an exceptionally big job and much of it was carried on under the handicap of working in a cold room with very little heat and at times without any heat at all. I feel very thankful for the wonderful help extended to us by everyone concerned. Our board feels very grateful to the many fine volunteer workers, many of whom were working practically all the hours the hall was open. We also appreciate the wonderful help given us by the fine staff of employees working at the rationing board office at the city hall. Too much credit cannot be given the schools and school teachers of Pickaway county for their fine work in handling the 'A' registrations. The people who applied for coupons of various kinds showed a splendid spirit throughout the whole registration. Many of them had to stand in line for hours due to the extreme rush and very little complaint was heard from anyone. Naturally, some errors have been made and these errors will be corrected as time elapses and the program goes into full force. We know that the people will be patient and any such errors should be reported to the rationing board office."

CIRCUITEER.

TO ALL

EVERYONE: We're "Praising the Lord" more than usual, for one thing and another, and beginning to realize that in good times we never praise him half enough. But why not extend the area of gratefulness in some ways that ordinarily we don't think about? And not merely in the formal Thanksgiving time, but all along. Particularly in these harsh times, instead of kicking about it, or imagining that we're too much knocked around and put upon by a hard fate, why not thank the Lord for the hardening process? For to tell the plain truth, this nation was getting dangerously soft and flabby when the big blow struck. Not so much physically, but far too much mentally and emotionally. That meant decay. Now praise the Lord and welcome the toughening process!

CIRCUITEER.

TO MOTORISTS

DRIVERS: Gasoline rationing started this week, and with it came the necessity for more careful operation of your automobiles. Is it not just about time for you and your neighbors and other persons to talk about a share-the-ride program? All of you can do a swell job of cooperating if you will. This gasoline program was designated primarily to help save valuable rubber and you could certainly help a lot by organizing a share-the-ride group in your own community. I believe it could be done with very little effort.

CIRCUITEER.

TO AUTOISTS

FRIENDS: This is the season of the year referred to by highway experts as the most dangerous of all, but it need not be if you will only be careful. Highways in some districts are dangerous, while in others snow and ice have been removed in an easy manner. It is on roads of the rural section where highway groups have not been able to complete all their work that driving may be more dangerous. Nearly all of you have been cooperating very well in the government's 35-mile-an-hour program. Careful driving for you is a matter of course. Others have been driving just as usual, and it is these motorists who will find highway travel more dangerous.

CIRCUITEER.

TO POLICE

MEN: I hope that you are able to locate sneak thieves who invaded the Walnut street school during the last week end, stealing two radios and $15 in pennies, nickles and dimes saved by children of the school for purchase of War Savings Stamps. These fellows whoever they may be should be punished as severely as it is possible to punish them. They have no sense of fairness, and they prove this by taking away the savings of children.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON—With this war's end a bigger row is due to start in the United States, over what we Yankees owe to the rest of the world, than the pending rumpus among nations to international.

Charles P. Stewart

Our own prospective internal conflict won't involve the employment of chemical explosives but the language will be explosive, aplenty.

Politically it will be equally so. The lines already are being drawn, rapidly, between the rival masses of competing belligerents. You can sense it in newspaper editorials, in reports of speeches at forums, in radio broadcasts, in verbal congressional exchanges and in quite a few federally executive activities.

The opposition group's version is that today's conflict will terminate with the entire globe flat broke—excepting only we western hemispherical folk.

Concessions
Naturally, according to this school of arguers, the rest will clamor for us to split with 'em—by cancelling debts (which'll be uncollectable, anyway), by future lease-lending (on into infinite futurity), by admitting their emigrants "ad lib," by knocking down our tariff regulations and by what-ever additional concessions as we think up or as they may suggest to us.

Not to mention that opponents of such a plan think it would be overly generous on our part, they refer to it as outright foolishness.

Their thesis is that the war'll wind up with about 80 per cent of civilization busted, but with our 20 per cent somewhat better off than the rest.

"Why not, then," they ask, "STAY better off for two or three succeeding centuries? By being generous now we may, perhaps, prove to have kind of stabilized things by 2142 or thereabouts"—but that's figuring impractically ahead, they calculate.

It's a form of reckoning that the opposition bunch denounces as pro-war subsequently.

That is to say, as they view the matter, less we voluntarily divide up with our fellow-victors, they presently will be driven to fight with us for their share of the war-won gravy.

In other words, Britain, for instance, will be bankrupted. Germany also.

They both will be in the same soup.

Won't there be a disposition, between 'em, to combine to stick US up?

I make no such prediction. Nevertheless, it's a ground upon which certain little forecasts have been based.

It's happened before that there have been Anglo-German economic combinations versus the United States.

In the Office
There is, at any rate, developing commercial rift between the United States and our war-tornly associated powers—not an immediate one, but anticipatory.

At the moment there's no competition, naturally.

It's that post-war situation that will manifest itself.

Then it'll become conspicuous, particularly as between the United States and Great Britain.

There's no argument that our administration is pro-British and is going to stay so, but will it lap over into the post-war period? And mayn't it get sore at us with post-war developments?

That's an era that it's interesting to guess about.

Cause of Tuberculosis Found When Koch Proved It a Germ

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SIXTY YEARS ago on March 24, 1882, a dumpy, courtiered doctor named Robert Koch stood up before the Berlin Physiological Society and read a paper in which he proved that a certain germ was the cause of tuberculosis.

Since then we have not had to guess the cause of this universal disease or ascribe it to vague forces such as heredity or miasma. We know the cause to be a germ; we know the habits of the germ; we know what it grows on; we know how it passes from one human to another and from infected cows to human beings in milk, and all of its customs and habits.

Furthermore, since then, we are able to tell by examination of the sputum of an individual whether or not his cough and fever are due to tuberculosis of the lungs or to some other disease. Robert Koch laid guesswork about tuberculosis forever in its grave.

His discovery was the result of a great deal of industry combined with flashes of genius—inspiration in interpreting the new things he saw under the microscope and in inventing new methods of research.

The most important of these methods was the discovery that bacteria would grow outside the body on culture media—a commonplace of the bacteriological laboratory now. He accidentally discovered colonies of bacteria growing on the cut surface of a potato and for a long time he used foods—sugars, etc.—to cultivate his germs.

Cultivation of Germs

When he started out to cultivate the germs he found in tuberculous tissue, however, he struck a snag. They would not grow on any of the ordinary media. Finally he had the inspiration of trying them on human tissue, using blood serum. He inoculated a tube of sterile blood serum with tissue which he had obtained from a case of tuberculosis and crushed it so as to expose the germs.

Patiently, from day to day, he examined the serum under the microscope but for a week or 10 days he found no germs. Most of his germs grew on media in from 24 hours to three or four days. He was about to throw his blood serum away, but fortunately he was patient enough to keep looking and finally at the end of two weeks he saw a colony of tubercle bacilli. The tubercle bacillus is one of the slowest growing of any that attack man.

Four Famous Postulates

Koch's paper of 1882 did far more, however, than simply announce the cause of tuberculosis. He laid down the four famous postulates to determine whether a given germ is the cause of a given disease:

First: You must find the germ in association with the disease and it must be found in association with no other disease.

Second: You must be able to cultivate the germ outside the body on artificial media.

Third: You must be able to take the isolated germs and produce the disease in animals.

Fourth: Pure cultures of the organisms must again be made from inoculated animals.

Since that day 60 years ago we have been able to initiate intelligently all the hygienic measures which have cut the rate of tuberculosis to a point that Koch himself would have regarded as unbelievably small. In order to further this work, buy Christmas Seals.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. B.:—You say that glands cause the bearded lady's beard. I have an enlarged thyroid gland and an alarming number of hairs on my face for which I have considered the electric needle. Which do you advise, the electric needle or thyroid extract, if given under a doctor's care?

Answer: The thyroid gland is very little concerned with hair growth in women. The adrenal gland is responsible for that. Under the circumstances, in order to be sure, I would advise the use of the electric needle.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO
Decoration of Circleville's main square for the Christmas season was underway. Plans for the arrangement were similar to those used in former years.

More than 300 pupils were to participate in the county music festival to be held in the Ashville school on December 9, according to announcement by George D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools.

More than 50 were present when Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker entertained the Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church of Williamsport.

10 YEARS AGO
Fred C. Clark, assisted by Mrs. Orion King, was to head the Benevolent Society's drive for Christmas baskets for the needy.

Young people of the churches of Pickaway county were requested to meet at the United Brethren community house to organize a county young people's association.

Jimmy Moffitt, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Moffitt, suffered a deep one and one-half inch gash over his left eye when he fell from the bicycle on which he rode with James Groce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Groce.

25 YEARS AGO
To conserve the supply of food and fuel, the fuel administration of Pickaway county called attention of the public to regulations under which all coal dealers were to sell but one ton of coal at a time to consumers. Care was urged in the use of food.

Miss Bessie Elm, Los Angeles, Cal., a daughter of Samuel M. Elm of Williamsport, was ordered to report at a base hospital at Camp Lewis, Tacoma, Wash., and expected to be sent to somewhere in France.

Embattled Love

BY LORENA CARLETON
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS
A chance meeting in the San Francisco fog leads to a spur-of-the-moment marriage in Reno by PAIGE SHELTON, whose sweetheart has just been killed fighting for the Allies, and RESTWICK (RUSTY) CARNES III, wealthy descendant of early Hawaiian settlers. Rusty marries to spite the girl he thinks he loves, EUGENIA NORTH, his selfish fiancée.

CHAPTER SEVEN
RESTWICK CARNES walked in while Paige still was searching in the box for a card. She spoke her perplexity. "There's no card."

"They are from me, of course," he snapped. "From whom else could they be?"

The girl's stormy black brows rose with insolence. "There are a number of persons who might send me flowers."

Rusty made a great face as he licked a couple of Maaslian steamship stickers and applied them to small hand trunks. "To Paige Shelton, perhaps, but not Mrs. Restwick Carnes, as the box directs. Resurrect your intelligence, my pet," he drawled insultingly. "No one else knows you are Mrs. Carnes."

"Except Eugenia," Paige knotted a gray turban about her hair with a savage slinging of her arms.

"What rot!" scoffed Rusty. "Eugenia would scarcely send you flowers. Now we've no time for you to put on one of your disagreeable scenes. The boys are on the way up for the bags. I'd like to be at the boat in about 15 minutes. I've never seen a woman who could be on time, but please try."

Paige felt her suddenness mounting as she went into the bedroom. It was partly caused by his jeers, partly by his bounding vitality, so surprising considering his dissipation. She put on the mauve and gray-striped topcoat that matched her tailored suit, then hurriedly transferred articles in her black purse to a huge gray one. Its inner structure was identical, with the large cache back of a compact and cigarette case. Into that section she put the same bulky, chamois-wrapped package.

When she rejoined Rusty he made a matter-of-fact comment. "I want you to wear those orchids. There will be photographers at the boat."

"How romantic!" jeered the girl. But she pinned the flowers onto her lapel as they went down to the lobby.

Although there were only two cameramen waiting in the small foyer beside the lanai suites when the newly married couple arrived on the Maaslian it seemed to the girl that they were being met by a dozen. Possibly because those two men were talking loudly and excitedly with the steward who was refusing to let them into the Carnes' cabin.

One was yelling. "But he told us to meet him there. Be a right guy and open up."

"Yeh! Be a right guy," seconded his partner. "There's bound to be champagne in there."

"There is," the steward poked one photographer in the chest. "That's why you're not going in there. Besides, I've just put some of their luggage inside. They'll be along soon."

The other newspaperman protected his pal with belligerence. "You're gonna be sorry when you find out how good a friend of ours Rusty Carnes is."

The steward summoned a taunting expression of pain and made a clucking sound. "Then you should be glad to wait for him. Would you force your way into a friend's suite and drink his champagne before he could get there?"

"Heck, yes!"

The second cameraman muttered, "Sure we would. Do you think we're dopes?"

Rusty was ahead of Paige as they eavesdropped at the top of the A-deck companionway. "Hi, fellas," he called to the refractory cameraman. The blond cocker spaniel in his arms also yelped a greeting. The steward looked a bit ill at ease at Carnes' friendliness, but quickly recovered composure and went on his way to other duties.

Rusty's arm was about her, an ecstatic smile spread over his face.

"Thank heaven you're here. But hey, what goes on?" one asked. "Even with a wig that's not Eugenia North."

His companion, leaning against the door of Suite 12, snapped to an upright position. "Paige Shelton," he said, his surprise so intense that it emerged as a hoarse whisper.

"Hello, Gabe," he answered with perfect composure. But her gray-gloved hand blended with his in a grasp too strong. "How nice to see you again."

Parrot like he echoed, "Nice to see you again."

Rusty's manner was disconcerted, but he made no comment other than, "Come on in, boys." He held open the heavy door for his wife and the two photographers, who sidled in to protect their picture-making equipment. Rusty twisted the lock to assure privacy while they posed.

For the first shot he and Paige leaned against the rail of the lanai—her own section of private deck. Rusty's arm was about her, an ecstatic smile spread over his face showing regular, very white teeth. The orchids, silhouetted, would show up well, mused Paige, and smiled also. Next, the bamboo adjacent so Paige and Rusty could stretch their arms and clasp hands in an idle, romantic fashion. Restwick Carnes gave his wife, not a smile this time, but a look of such adoration that Gabe's companion yelled, "Zowie! You should be an actor."

As if he wasn't, thought Paige. They posed a third time with Hilo Hazel, the blond cocker. Rusty's face was hugging his wife's, lips so near they almost kissed her cheek. Hilo Hazel really liked the girl, just as the shutter clicked.

Gabe spoke for the first time since his greeting. "That'll get 'em!"

When they finished the third shot Restwick sprinted over to open the door in response to the knocking that had started as a tapping of more and more guests, had grown into a banging. People catapulted in. A dozen and a half or more. The bedroom and the lanai were soon jammed. Rusty made rapid introductions, names all different, that Paige knew she never would remember. Yes, the names were different, but the facial expressions were the same. Blank astonishment, accompanied by outrageous gasps. However, they soon forgot their devouring curiosity—at least until they could get off the ship—to surge about Rusty, who was getting ready to pour the champagne.

"I'll take her," Paige offered. The photographer Gabe said, "I'll go with you."

"No, Gabe," vetoed Rusty. "Stay here. I can use you."

When Paige returned she pushed her way to the lanai rail. So did Gabe. Instantly Restwick Carnes was beside them. Beneath them on the pier there suddenly was a great commotion. A pell-mell fight that involved three sailors, an equal number of policemen, and a couple of men in civilian clothes.

Gabe informed, "There are 250 Australian sailors on board going to Sydney. And a group of defense workers bound for Honolulu. Looks exciting."

Rusty did not answer. But Paige did.

"Very exciting," she seconded. But her eyes were not watching the pier brawl. They were watching a girl who was swiftly ascending the gangplank. She wore dark glasses and all her hair was snugly covered with a turban. A turban made even more secure with a bronze sequin-budded hatpin.

TO POLICE

MEN: I hope that you are able to locate sneak thieves who invaded the Walnut street school during the last week end, stealing two radios and $15 in pennies, nickles and dimes saved by children of the school for purchase of War Savings Stamps. These fellows whoever they may be should be punished as severely as it is possible to punish them. They have no sense of fairness, and they prove this by taking away the savings of children.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON:—With this war's end a bigger row is due to start in the United States, over what we Yankees owe to the rest of the world, than the pending rumpus amounts to internationally.

Our own prospective internal conflict won't involve the employment of chemical explosives but the language will be explosive, aplenty.

Politically it will be equally so.

The lines already are being drawn, rapidly, between the rival masses of coming belligerents. You can sense it in newspaper editorials, in reports of speeches at forums, in radio broadcasts, in verbal congressional exchanges and in quite a few federally executive activities.

One element wants Uncle Sam to make himself as helpful as possible, at his own expense, toward getting all of earth's peoples onto a basis of mutual economic prosperity, that'll prevent ANY of 'em from wishing to get into another conflict. Not only, these charlatans contend, is that the charitable, christian way of looking at the situation, but, in the long run, it'll be a policy in our American interest.

The opposition group's version is that today's conflict will terminate with the entire globe flat broke—excepting only our western hemisphere.

Concessions

Naturally, according to this school of arguers, the rest will clamor for us to split with 'em—by cancelling debts (which'll be uncollectable, anyway), by future lease-lending (on into infinite futurity), by admitting their emigrants "ad lib," by knocking down our tariff regulations and by whatever additional concessions as we think up or as they may suggest to us.

Not to mention that opponents of such a plan think it would be overly generous on our part, they refer to it as outright foolishness.

Their thesis is that the war'll wind up with about 80 per cent of civilization busted, but with our 20 per cent somewhat better off than the rest.

"Why not, then," they ask, "STAY better off for two or three succeeding centuries? By being generous now we may, perhaps, prove to have kind of stabilized things by 2142 or thereabouts"—but that's figuring impractically ahead, they calculate.

It's a form of reckoning that the opposition bunch denounces as pro-war subsequently.

That is to say, as they view the matter, unless we voluntarily divide up with our fellow-victors, they presently will be driven to fight with us for their share of the war-won gravy.

In other words, Britain, for instance, will be bankrupted. Germany also.

They both will be in the same soup.

Won't there be a disposition, between 'em, to combine to stick US up?

I make no such prediction. Nevertheless, it's a ground upon which certain little forecasts have been based.

It's happened before that there have been Anglo-German economic combinations versus the United States.

In the Offing

There is, at any rate, developing commercial rift between the United States and our wartime ally—associated powers—not an immediate one, but anticipatory.

At the moment there's no competition, naturally.

It's that post-war situation that will manifest itself.

Then it'll become conspicuous, particularly as between the United States and Great Britain.

There's no argument that our administration is pro-British and is going to stay so, but will it lap over into the post-war period? And mayn't it get sore at us with post-war developments?

That's an era that it's interesting to guess about.

Cause of Tuberculosis Found When Koch Proved It a Germ

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

SIXTY YEARS ago on March 24, 1882, a dumpy, countenanced doctor named Robert Koch stood up before the Berlin Physiological Society and read a paper in which he proved that a certain germ was the cause of tuberculosis.

Since then we have not had to guess the cause of this universal disease or ascribe it to vague forces such as heredity or miasma. We know the cause to be a germ; we know the habits of the germ; we know what it grows on; we know how it passes from one human to another and from infected cows to human beings in milk, and all of its customs and habits.

Furthermore, since then, we are able to tell by examination of the sputum of an individual whether or not his cough and fever are due to tuberculosis of the lungs or to some other disease. Robert Koch laid guesswork about tuberculosis forever in its grave.

His discovery was the result of a great deal of industry combined with flashes of genius—inspiration in interpreting the new things he saw under the microscope and in inventing new methods of research.

The most important of these methods was the discovery that bacteria would grow outside the body on culture media—a commonplace of the bacteriological laboratory now. He accidentally discovered colonies of bacteria growing on the cut surface of a potato and for a long time he used food—sugars, etc.—to cultivate his germs.

Cultivation of Germs

When he started out to cultivate the germs he found in tuberculous tissue, however, he struck a snag. They would not grow on any of the ordinary media. Finally he had the inspiration of trying them on human tissue, using blood serum. He inoculated a tube of sterile blood serum with tissue which he had obtained from a case of tuberculosis and crushed it so as to expose the germs.

Patiently, from day to day, he examined the serum under the microscope but for a week or 10 days he found no germs. Most of his germs grew on media in from 24 hours to three or four days. He was about to throw his blood serum away, but fortunately he was patient enough to keep looking and finally at the end of two weeks he saw a colony of tubercle bacilli. The tuberculosis germ is one of the slowest growing of any that attack man.

Four Famous Postulates

Koch's paper of 1882 did far more, however, than simply announce the cause of tuberculosis. He laid down the four famous postulates to determine whether a given germ is the cause of a given disease:

First: You must find the germ in association with the disease and it must be found in association with no other disease.

Second: You must be able to cultivate the germ outside the body on artificial media.

Third: You must be able to take the isolated germs and produce the disease in animals.

Fourth: Pure cultures of the organisms must again be made from inoculated animals.

Since that day 60 years ago we have been able to initiate intelligently all the hygienic measures which have cut the rate of tuberculosis to a point that Koch himself would have regarded as unbelievably small. In order to further this work, buy Christmas Seals.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Decoration of Circleville's main square for the Christmas season was underway. Plans for the arrangement were similar to those used in former years.

More than 300 pupils were to participate in the county music festival to be held in the Ashville school on December 9, according to announcement by George D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools.

More than 50 were present when Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker entertained the Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church of Williamsport.

10 YEARS AGO

Fred C. Clark, assisted by Mrs. Orion King, was to head the Benevolent Society's drive for Christmas baskets for the needy.

Young people of the churches of Pickaway county were requested to meet at the United Brethren community house to organize a county young people's association.

Jimmy Moffitt, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Moffitt, suffered a deep one and one-half inch gash over his left eye when he fell from the bicycle on which he rode with James Groce, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Groce.

25 YEARS AGO

To conserve the supply of food and fuel, the fuel administration of Pickaway county called attention of the public to regulations under which all coal dealers were to sell but one ton of coal at a time to consumers. Care was urged in the use of food.

Miss Bessie Elm, Los Angeles, Cal., a daughter of Samuel M. Elm of Williamsport, was ordered to report at a base hospital at Camp Lewis, Tacoma, Wash., and expected to be sent to somewhere in France.

STARS SAY—

For Friday, December 4

ALTHOUGH this may be a moderately lively and ambitious day, with the energies and abilities centered on definite programs and objectives, yet the way is beset by various forms of upset, opposition, disappointment and obstacle, making it difficult to make the cherished goals. There may be strange or surprising efforts to delay or disintegrate, and very likely there may be stubborn antagonism or want of cooperation from elders or old institutions.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which their energies and ambitions may be disposed to aim at high and important objectives, but these may lead them to walls of opposition, stubborn obstacles, and static situations as well as to a sudden disruptive condition arising from a strange, irregular or foreign and unsuspected source. It will be wise to circumvent these disintegrating forces by shunning all forms of extravagance of funds, energies and even acts and speech.

Embattled Love

SYNOPSIS
A chance meeting in the San Francisco for leads to a spur-of-the-moment marriage in Reno by PAIGE SHELTON, whose sweetheart has just been killed fighting for the Allies, and RESTWICK (RUSTY) CARNES III, wealthy descendant of early Hawaiian settlers. Rusty marries to spite the girl he thinks he loves. EUGENIA NORTH, his selfish fiancée.

CHAPTER SEVEN
RESTWICK CARNES walked in while Paige still was searching in the box for a card. She spoke her perplexity. "There's no card."
"They are from me, of course," he snapped. "From whom else could they be?"
The girl's stormy black brows rose with insolence. "There are a number of persons who might send me flowers."
Rusty made a great face as he looked a couple of Maasai steamship stickers and applied them to small hand trunks. "To Paige Shelton, perhaps, but not Mrs. Restwick Carnes, as the box directs. Resurrect your intelligence, my pet," he drawled insultingly. "No one else knows you are Mrs. Carnes."

"Except Eugenia," Paige knotted a gray turban about her hair with a savage slinging of her arms.
"What rot!" scoffed Rusty. "Eugenia would scarcely send you flowers. Now we've no time for you to put on one of your disagreeable scenes. The boys are on the way up for the bags. I'd like to be at the boat in about 15 minutes. I've never seen a woman who could be on time, but please try."

Paige felt her sullenness mounting as she went into the bedroom. It was partly caused by his jeers, partly by his bounding vitality, so surprising considering his disposition. She put on the mauve and gray-striped topcoat that matched her tailored suit, then hurriedly transferred articles in her black purse to a huge gray one. Its inner structure was identical, with the large cache back of a compact and cigarette case. Into the section she put the same bulky, champagne-wrapped package.

When she rejoined Rusty he made a matter-of-fact comment. "I want you to wear those orchids. There will be photographers at the boat."

"How romantic," jeered the girl. But she pinned the flowers onto her lapel as they went down to the lobby.

Although there were only two cameramen waiting in the small foyer beside the lanai suites when the married couple arrived on the Maasai it seemed to the girl that they were being met by a dozen. Possibly because those two men were talking loudly and excitedly with the steward who was refusing to let them into the Carnes' cabin.

One was yelling, "But he told us to meet him there. Be a right guy and open up."
"Yeh! Be a right guy," seconded his partner. "There's bound to be champagne in there."

"There is," the steward poked one photographer in the chest. "That's why you're not going in there. Besides, I've just put some of their luggage inside. They'll be along soon."

The other newspaperman protested his pal with belligerence. "You're gonna be sorry when you find out how good a friend of ours Rusty Carnes is."

The steward summoned a taunting expression of pain and made a clucking sound. "Then you should be glad to wait for him. Would you force your way into a friend's suite and drink his champagne before he could get there?"

"Heck, yes!"

The second cameraman muttered, "Sure we would. Do you think we're dopes?"

Rusty was ahead of Paige as they eavesdropped at the top of the A-deck companionway. "Hi, fellas," he called to the refractory cameraman. The blond cocker spaniel in his arms also yelped a greeting. The steward looked a bit ill all at Carnes' friendliness, but quickly recovered composure and went on his way to other duties.

Rusty's arm was about her, an ecstatic smile spread over his face.

"Thank heaven you're here. But hey, what goes on?" one asked. "Even with a wig that's not Eugenia North."

His companion, leaning against the door of Suite 12, snapped to an upright position. "Paige Shelton!" he said, his surprise so intense that it emerged as a hoarse whisper.

"Hello, Gabe," she answered with perfect composure. But her gray-gloved hand blended with his in a grasp too strong. "How nice to see you again."

Parrot like he echoed, "Nice to see you again."

Rusty's manner was disconcerted, but he made no comment other than, "Come on in, boys." He held open the heavy door for his wife and the two photographers, who sidled in to protect their picture-making equipment. Rusty twisted the lock to assure privacy while they posed.

For the first shot he and Paige leaned against the rail of the lanai—their own section of private deck. Rusty's arm was about her, an ecstatic smile spread over his face showing regular, very white teeth. The orchids, silhouetted, would show up well, mused Paige, and smiled also. Next, the bamboo chaise lounges were moved almost adjacent so Paige and Rusty could stretch their arms and clasp hands in an idle, romantic fashion. Restwick Carnes gave his wife, not a smile this time, but a look of such adoration that Gabe's companion yelled, "Zowie! You should be an actor."

As if he wasn't, thought Paige. They posed a third time with Hilo Hazel, the blond cocker. Rusty's face was hugging his wife's, lips so near they almost kissed her cheek. Hilo Hazel really kissed the girl, just as the shutter clicked.

Gabe spoke for the first time since his greeting. "That'll get 'em!"

When they finished the third shot Restwick sprinted over to open the door in response to the knocking that had started as a tapping, and now with the co-operation of more and more guests, had grown into a banging. People catapulted in. A dozen and a half or more. The bedroom and the lanai were soon jammed. Rusty made rapid introductions, names all different, that Paige knew she never would remember. Yes, the names were different, but the facial expressions were the same. Blank astonishment, accompanied by outrageous gasps. However, they soon forgot their devouring curiosity—at least until they could get off the ship—to surge about Rusty, who was getting ready to pour the champagne.

If another person makes a statement the validity of which you doubt, question it courteously; don't denounce it.

Today's Horoscope

A birthday today means that you have confidence, self-reliance, diligence in effort and tenacity of purpose. You like to excel, and have no patience with those who are careless or inefficient. You are genial, warm-hearted and deeply affectionate. You will gain through marital, engineering and secret affairs during the next year, but an elder may cause loss or annoyance through business or correspondence. Watch expenditure—avoid extravagance. The child born on this date will be wholehearted and enthusiastic in all he or she undertakes, good-natured, kindly disposed and clever, but liable to trouble through elders and imposition.

Mrs. G. H. Adkins Chosen For President

Mrs. G. H. Adkins will head the official family of the Women's Society for Christian Service of the Methodist church for another year, having been reelected Thursday at the meeting at the church. The Rev. Neil Peterson presided at the election and others chosen for 1943 are Mrs. W. T. Ulm, vice president; Miss Letta Belle Beavers, recording secretary; Mrs. F. E. Barnhill, corresponding secretary; Miss Marvonne Howard, treasurer; Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer, secretary of missionary education; Mrs. Raymond Rader, secretary of local church activities; Mrs. H. W. Plum, secretary of student work; Mrs. W. L. Sprouse, secretary of Young People's work; Mrs. Neil Peterson, secretary of children's work; Mrs. Harold Pontius, secretary of literature and publications, and Miss Lottie Gearhart, secretary of supplies.

The Christmas program arranged by Mrs. N. E. Reichelderfer followed a fine devotional program by the leader. Characters in the program, "Christmas for the World," included Mrs. Reichelderfer, as Christmas Bells; Mrs. Charles Fuller, Christmas Star; Mrs. Herschel Hill, Christmas Candles; Mrs. Earl Hill, Christmas Gifts; and Miss Anna Grimes, Christmas Greens. Mrs. Edwin Bach served as soloist and Mrs. Harold Defenbaugh was piano accompanist for the production.

The president requested all members of the executive board to meet at the church at 2 p. m. Sunday, December 6, to reorganize the circles and make plans for the work of the new year.

Wedding Reception
Mrs. Roy Stout, 520 South Court street, has returned from Columbus where she attended the wedding reception for 50 guests in honor of her nephew, Lieutenant Roy L. Holloway, and his bride at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Cline, East Cole street. The affair followed their quiet church wedding Wednesday evening.

Lt. Holloway, a former resident of Circleville, is with the U. S. Army and is in training at Camp Monmouth, N. J. He and his bride will live in New Jersey until he leaves for active service.

Pickaway P-T. A.
Sixty members and guests attended the quarterly meeting of the Pickaway Parent-Teacher association Thursday in the school auditorium. Reports were made of the satisfactory sales of grain for the benefit of the P-T. A. finance committee. It was decided to continue serving hot lunches for the school children. Mrs. Neil Morris, president, conducted the brief business hour.

The program opened with group singing followed by a vocal solo, "White Cliffs of Dover," by Nancy McGinnis with Helen Wilson at the piano; piano solo, Ann Bradley; readings, two original poems by Dr. Gardner of Kingston, by Neil Morris; tumbling stunts, physical education students of the upper grades; vocal solo, Hewitt Hamout, with Nancy McGinnis at the piano. The program closed with group singing. Mrs. Ralph Hall was in charge of the interesting entertainment.

Mrs. Ralph Head and her committee served refreshments.

Joint Missionary Session
Women's Missionary association and Otterbein Guild of the United Brethren church held a joint session Thursday with Mrs. J. R. Kirkpatrick as leader. Miss Lucille May opened the meeting with the piano prelude, "Silent Night."

Numbers on the interesting program were "The Christmas Highway," Miss Gladys Noggle; group song, "Angels from the Realms of Glory"; scroll reading of the scripture, Mrs. Ralph Long and Mrs. James Pierce; solo, "Away in the Manger," Phyllis Hawkes; "Hallowed Memories of Christmas," based on Bible facts, Mrs. Kirkpatrick; solo, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Eleanor Mast; prayer period, Mrs. John Kerns and Mrs. E. S. Neuding; short talk, "The Pastor's responsibility to the children of the church," the Rev. J. E. Two auditionists, who will strive for the awards of contracts with the Metropolitan Opera Company at the end of the season are Laura Castellano, lyric soprano of Rochester, N. Y., and Hugh Thompson, baritone, of Tacoma, Washington. The artists and the orchestra will be under the direction of Maestro Wilfred Pelletier.

It was but ten months ago that Miss Castellano under her operatic debut, which was in the role of Gretel in "Hansel and Gretel", at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Prior to that she had sung on radio stations of her native city and with the Rochester Symphony. A scholarship brought her to New York, where she has been studying and singing since.

Though a competent singer when he first came to New York, Thompson was refused a scholarship with the Juilliard Foundation because of his youth. Returning to the West again, he studied music at the University of Washington for two more years, subsequent to which he was accepted by Juilliard where he studied further for over five years. He has also sung in various roles with the New Opera Company.

Yankee Clipper's Wife Takes Reno Residence

RENO, Dec. 4—The three year old marriage of baseball's highest salaried player, Joe Di Maggio, and the former Dorothy Arnold, blonde screen starlet and radio singer, appeared headed for the divorce courts today with the disclosure that Mrs. Di Maggio has established residence in Reno.

Mrs. Di Maggio registered at the swank Riverside hotel in Reno yesterday, and it was learned she had engaged an attorney. However, Mrs. Di Maggio refused to discuss the reason for her presence in Reno.

With her was Joseph Paul Di Maggio, III, the couple's one year old son.

The Di Maggios were married November 19, 1939 at St. Peter's and Paul's church in San Francisco in an elaborate wedding which drew up traffic for blocks around.

The baseball player first met Miss Arnold at New York in 1938 when she was a radio singer. They met a few months later again at Hollywood, where both were making pictures.

Last May Mrs. Di Maggio visited Reno, but at the time Di Maggio declared:

"Reports that we are planning to divorce are absolutely not true. My wife is just visiting friends in Reno."

Mrs. Di Maggio later returned home and divorce rumors were halted.

Circleville high Tigers, badly beaten at Lancaster Tuesday night in their first encounter of the season hope to do better Friday night when they invade Greenfield to meet the first McClain contingent coached by anyone other than Red Armstrong in a good many years.

Greenfield's team, which is reported to be strong, is mentioned this year by Forrest Creason, coach at Pomeroy prior to this year. On the McClain crew are Newell, six foot four inch center; Elberfeld, Davis, Robinson and other lads who are forming a capable combination. Biggest loss from last year's team was Don Grate, brilliant center who is now at Coach Boy Black will take 15 Tigers with him, five of them designated as the starting team in the varsity game. The other 10 may participate in the reserve encounter. Boys playing in the reserve contest may play in the varsity tilt.

The Red and Black mentor has not indicated the personnel of his starting five.

SINKWICH FIXED GOAL, MADE IT; HE'S REAL ACE

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, Dec. 4—One of the few football players who ever set out avowedly to gain all-America recognition and attained that goal is Frankie Sinkwich, the heavy-hipped University of Georgia back. He's a unanimous choice this season after being almost universally acclaimed last year when he was a junior. He is the least surprised of all over the way his unique ability is being emblazoned in the headlines. His goal ever since his freshman year has been the position he now holds as the outstanding football player of the year.

On December 8 he will receive the Heisman memorial trophy here in New York emblematic of his place at the head of the football ranks as a fitting climax to an utterly spectacular career. A native of Ohio, he is as beloved in Georgia as a native son, and bears none of the stigma that might be associated with one of them dubbed Yankees.

Last season, that is in 1941, he won the poll among the college players as the most valuable player in the game, while leading the South in virtually every department of play despite a broken jaw and a face held together by baling wire a good part of the time. Just before Georgia came East to play Columbia, he said to the Georgia publicity staff:

"I intend to make all-America. You get me the publicity in New York and I'll do the rest."

He helped to beat Columbia, he got all-America recognition virtually everywhere and, if he missed out here and there in 1941, he has more than made up for it in 1942.

Named the outstanding college team in the East by a committee of sports writers, B. C. will receive the award donated in the name of the late August V. Lambert, Penn. Penn. State, Holy Cross, Colgate and Navy finished in the voting in that order.

MEL HEIN TO BECOME UNION COLLEGE COACH
NEW YORK, Dec. 4—Mel Hein, for twelve years the iron-man center of the New York pro football giants, donned the robes of a college instructor today.

Welcomed to the faculty of Union college of Schenectady, N. Y., at an annual alumni banquet in New York last night, Hein, who will serve as physical education instructor and football coach, will assume his new duties immediately following the Giants last game of the season against the Brooklyn Dodgers Sunday.

MANY BASEBALL QUESTIONS PENDING

Major Session Breaks Up With Little Progress Being Reported

By H. C. Warren

CHICAGO, Dec. 4—The National and American baseball leagues, after one of the least productive mid-Winter meetings in years, gave way today to the sessions of the minor leagues.

The majors adjourned with a number of their problems still unsolved, a principal one being the question of how to meet the request of Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman for still further curtailment of travel during the 1943 training and regular season.

The issue received little formal discussion and it was left up to the individual clubs since their problems are different, especially as to the training season.

The two leagues however did decide:

1. The 25-player limit of last season will be retained in 1943.

2. Each club will have the privilege of playing 14 night games with the exception of the Washington Senators who will be permitted to play 21 night games.

3. Both leagues will cooperate to the utmost of their ability in reducing their travel mileage.

Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis left a sick bed to preside over the joint session of the two leagues which wound up their three-day meetings.

The only flurry in the trading market came at the close of the meetings when the Chicago White Sox stepped in and acquired three players—Outfielder Melvin Mazzera from San Diego, Cal.; club, and two right hand pitchers from the Shreveport, Texas league club, Floyd Spears and Gordon Maltberger.

These deals and the signing of Gabby Hartnett as playing manager for the Jersey City club of the International league were the sole exceptions to the general inactivity in this line.

One of the most disturbing issues the baseball men will have to null over concerns the future of Negro athletes in the major leagues.

When 10 delegates representing the Chicago council of the CIO sought to lay before the joint session a demand that Negroes be given a right to try out for berths with the National and American leagues an ancient controversy was revived.

Commissioner Landis stifled the movement for the moment by refusing to give the CIO representatives an audience on the ground that all subjects to be discussed must be submitted to the commissioner's office well in advance of the league meetings.

The majority of the major league representatives left for their homes, but some remained in the hope that the minor leagues, in session today, will release some valuable baseball talent which may be picked up by the big league clubs.

CORPS CLASS DRAWS 125 TO HIGH SCHOOL

J. Wray, Henry Gives Full Description Of Local Emergency Service

COUNTY SET FOR TEST

Short Whistle Blasts At 12:25 Monday To Signal C. D. Assembly

Circleville and several rural Pickaway county communities were marking time Friday awaiting next Monday's daytime air raid alarm and statewide mobilization scheduled at 12:25 p. m. Preparations for the test have been completed in Circleville with the Container Corporation whistle to be sounded in a series of short blasts. Every member of the Defense Council's various branches is to report at his previously assigned station. He will then be permitted to return to his work immediately.

The 12:25 p. m. alert is being observed throughout the state, this being the hour of the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor just one year ago.

75 End Training

In preparation for the alert 75 air raid wardens, fire watchers and members of the emergency drivers' corps completed their training Thursday night when a general instruction course was offered at the high school under direction of J. Wray Henry, high school principal. The class was attended by 125 Civilian Defense workers. Mr. Henry received special training during the summer at Ohio State and Purdue universities and his work in the general instruction course was outstanding.

All 75 wardens, fire watchers and emergency drivers are now ready to receive their arm bands. Decals, which will identify their cars, are also ordered, the latter being provided at the individual's own expense. The Defense Council buys arm bands for the various units.

In addition to the 75 persons who completed training Thursday another 50, enrolled in various branches of the Defense Council's program, neared the end of their training.

New Bomb Explained

Mr. Henry explained a new German incendiary bomb which was described as very dangerous. The new bomb is reported to contain TNT.

Circleville's preparation for the Monday alert is complete.

Control Center corps will meet in Civilian Defense headquarters in the basement of the courthouse. Air raid wardens, fire watchers, auxiliary firemen, auxiliary policemen, messengers, members of the drivers corps, utility repair corps, members of the emergency medical unit and others will report to their leaders.

The alert is a test of assembly time for volunteers. Immediately after reporting at their stations individuals will be released.

There will be no halt in traffic and pedestrians will be permitted on the streets.

Mayor Fred J. Hines of Ashville, who is organizing his Defense Council, said Friday that Ashville residents will be asked to participate in the alert. They are centering their efforts on a blackout expected to come within the next few weeks.

Williamsport's mayor, W. D. Heiskell, completed organization of his group early this week and all will be ready for the alert scheduled Monday. The village fire engine siren will be sounded to call all workers to their posts. They, too, will be released immediately after reporting.

New Holland's community Defense Corps gathered Tuesday evening at the call of Mayor Warren M. Arthur and A. W. Kirkpatrick, chief air raid warden, to receive instructions concerning the alert. New Holland is well organized, and its role in the test is expected to be a complete one.

Persons employed in defense industry are not expected to report for duty.

LUTHERAN MEN CHOOSE OFFICERS FOR NEW YEAR

Gladden Troutman, East Union street, was elected Thursday evening by Trinity Lutheran brotherhood as its president for the next year. Other officers named were L. K. Athey, vice-president; Edward Phebus, recording secretary; E. E. Wolf, reporting secretary; and Robert Bower, treasurer.

Robert Bower, traffic manager for John W. Eshelman and Sons, Inc., showed pictures of the firm's three mills, located at Lancaster and York, Pa., and Circleville, of the detailed processing of the various feeds that they manufacture, of their experimental farm at Lancaster, Pa. as well as the "Ring-gold Farm" of Robert D. Musser and much of his thoroughbred stock.

Mr. Bower concluded this part of the program by showing many interesting local scenes. The refreshment committee was headed by J. D. Hummel. It served baked ham, with sauer-kraut and dumplings, bread, butter and coffee.

At the next session to be held on Thursday evening, December 17, the Christmas programme will be in charge of Herbert Hammel as chairman, assisted by Charles L. Mack and Harry Kerns. Lunch will be served by R. L. Brehmer and a committee of nine members.

GIFT SHOPPING GIVES LIFT TO LOCAL BUSINESS

With Christmas shopping reaching an accelerated pitch in Circleville, reports from the state treasurer's office indicate that retail trading in the area is showing splendid gains.

During the week ending November 21 sales tax stamp receipts recorded at the office of County Treasurer Robert Colville amounted to $1,660.64, almost $500 more than in the same week a year ago when the total was $1,219.36.

The increase was one of the largest noted on the table released by the state treasurer's office. Total for the year so far in Pickaway county is $71,079.73, somewhat short of last year when restrictions on sales of certain items were not effective and when many higher priced items had not been dropped from production.

Reports for the November 21 week in other central Ohio counties include:

County	1942	1941
Ross	$3,605.74	$4,063.44
Perry	$1,208.82	$1,363.20

ASHVILLE

George Scothorn, Walnut township, while doing some work near the home fell and received a hip injury. The Schlegel ambulance Wednesday morning brought him here to Doc's Fixit Shop and an x-ray picture showed a fractured hip bone. He is now abed at his home and resting easily, so the home folks told us yesterday evening.

Ashville Roy Helwagen formerly of the County Seat is now a resident of Ashville, having but recently moved to the West Main street dwelling vacated by Lucius Hughes and wife who removed to the Capital City. Mr. Helwagen is employed at the Lockbourne air base, waterworks division.

Ashville Frank Grice, the long while and know how melon grower, has been for the last couple of weeks undergoing some repairs at a Columbus hospital, is reported as getting along fine and if all keeps on going in the same line, he hopes to be home here within the next few days. William Fischer (Pappy) ailing with rheumatism for the last few weeks, abed part time, is quite a bit better so "Young Bill" told us yesterday evening.

Ashville The display of soldier pictures at the Toole Electric Shop display window, is gradually on the increase, new ones being added frequently. If possible to get them, those in uniform are preferred. Have the promise of several new ones—and that's fine.

Ashville In a letter to his home family, the Walden Shermans near Marcy, Sergeant Lee Sherman at Gardner field, California, in charge of a ground airplane crew, writes that a few days ago he, with others, were up in the nearby mountains playing snowball.

Ashville The Ethel Kobel dwelling on East street, recently vacated by Steve Cook and family and undergoing some improvement, will be occupied soon by Junior Court-right and family.

Ashville Mrs. Bertha Petty was a recent visitor at the home of her son Rancy Petty, in Columbus. . . . Too, Mrs. Lillie Brinker was in the City guest of her son George and family. . . . Mrs. Leslie Smith and Miss Sally Shannon are visiting Mrs. Smith's son Page at an Alabama camp. . . . Walter Rathburn in war service for one year is stationed somewhere in Ireland and his brother Roland in service since October is somewhere in England. . . . Atty Guy Cline is in officers' training school at Camp Lee, Virginia and is among the candidates for a Second Lieutenant's place.

Ashville The snow storm of Wednesday morning, December 2, was a real one and put objects out of view in short distances away and was followed by the cold blitz the thermometer registering 2 above zero Thursday morning. Ten above zero this morning at 6 o'clock and is to be on the up slide today.

Ashville With the Marines—George Forquer has won distinction in his training at Parris Island, S. C. and has made the title, "sharp-shooter" scoring 215 times out of a possible 250. George received a shiny medal for his efforts and reports he will soon be on the receiving end of medals for using pistols, hand grenade and bayonet in a proficient manner. Furthermore, he will get an award for completing his basic training in satisfactory style. In addition to the various medals, George is to get an increase in pay for his achievements.

Ashville Thanksgiving dinner for Private Forquer was great he says, with the exception of the home spirit, but everything else was present—turkey, cigars, cigars, etc., for each marine.

Ashville Elmer Neff is slated for a furlough in the very near future. Elmer is a marine stationed at New River, N. C. and joined the service about a month ahead of Forquer, in October.

Ashville News from Wimpy Walden of Camp Campbell, Kentucky discloses the soldier boys too had a really fine dinner Thanksgiving day. Walden is a member of the armored infantry and is getting intensive training in close order drill, rifle and machine gun practice and general training. He says he has learned to tear down and reassemble a machine gun in "no time at all." Wimpy is enthusiastic for the Army and declares he has learned more in three weeks than he learned in his entire 22 years in civilian life.

Ashville Francis Huber, formerly of Great Lakes, Illinois is now in radio school in Rhode Island and is well pleased with his new duties. He is training for duty aboard a naval scouting plane and is scheduled for coastal patrol when his apprenticeship is completed. Huber joined the Navy this Fall and was recently in Ashville on his pre-sea duty furlough.

The Bad Lands area of South Dakota tells a fascinating story of earth-making through fossil remains of prehistoric alligators, rhinoceroses, three-toed horses and other extinct animals.

Belonging originally to the Belgian Baron Empain, LacMasson, Quebec, Canada, known for the Domaine d'Estrel, summer resort

in the Laurentians, is now an air force training center.

Walter Rathburn in war service for one year is stationed somewhere in Ireland and his brother Roland in service since October is somewhere in England. . . . Atty Guy Cline is in officers' training school at Camp Lee, Virginia and is among the candidates for a Second Lieutenant's place.

The snow storm of Wednesday morning, December 2, was a real one and put objects out of view in short distances away and was followed by the cold blitz the thermometer registering 2 above zero Thursday morning. Ten above zero this morning at 6 o'clock and is to be on the up slide today.

With the Marines—George Forquer has won distinction in his training at Parris Island, S. C. and has made the title, "sharp-shooter" scoring 215 times out of a possible 250. George received a shiny medal for his efforts and reports he will soon be on the receiving end of medals for using pistols, hand grenade and bayonet in a proficient manner. Furthermore, he will get an award for completing his basic training in satisfactory style. In addition to the various medals, George is to get an increase in pay for his achievements.

Thanksgiving dinner for Private Forquer was great he says, with the exception of the home spirit, but everything else was present—turkey, cigars, etc., for each marine.

Elmer Neff is slated for a furlough in the very near future. Elmer is a marine stationed at New River, N. C. and joined the service about a month ahead of Forquer, in October.

News from Wimpy Walden of Camp Campbell, Kentucky discloses the soldier boys too had a really fine dinner Thanksgiving day. Walden is a member of the armored infantry and is getting intensive training in close order drill, rifle and machine gun practice and general training. He says he has learned to tear down and reassemble a machine gun in "no time at all." Wimpy is enthusiastic for the Army and declares he has learned more in three weeks than he learned in his entire 22 years in civilian life.

Francis Huber, formerly of Great Lakes, Illinois is now in radio school in Rhode Island and is well pleased with his new duties. He is training for duty aboard a naval scouting plane and is scheduled for coastal patrol when his apprenticeship is completed. Huber joined the Navy this Fall and was recently in Ashville on his pre-sea duty furlough.

The Bad Lands area of South Dakota tells a fascinating story of earth-making through fossil remains of prehistoric alligators, rhinoceroses, three-toed horses and other extinct animals.

Belonging originally to the Belgian Baron Empain, LacMasson, Quebec, Canada, known for the Domaine d'Estel, summer resort

in the Laurentians, is now an air force training center.
